COPTIC WEDDING AT CAIRO.

Knocking the Bride's and Bridegroum's Heads

Miss Jane Whately, the blographer o her father, Archbishop Whately, now on a visit to her sister at Calro, has sent the following description of a Coptic wedding:

The bride was one of my sister's old pupils, the daughter of the matron who has charge of the boarders. The wed-ding was held at the bridegroom's house, as is usual here. When we came we were shown into a small room, so full of the friends and neighbors of the bride, all assembled in their smartest attire, that we did not at first perceive where the "queen of the day" was placed. She was seated on the floor, her head covered with a red shawl, silent and im-movable, and, as etiquette demands, took no notice of the visitors. Two or three companions were busy adorning her, her dress was a cay-flowered, bro-cade silk, the neck and the whole front of the corsage covered with gold coins and necklaces of gold spangles, etc. One woman was setting these gold orna-ments, white another was fastening a splendid set of diamonds on a band of white cloth, for security. These diamonds, consisting of a kind of diadem and several strings and chains, were very costly, and had been lent by a Moslem friend for the purpose. The ornaments of the wedding dress are generally either borrowed or bired. When all was ready, a thick white scarf bandkerchief, with a broad fringe of gold embroidery on it, was bound over her head, one end hanging down square over her face, and entirely concealing it. Over this the diamonds were carefully adjusted, making a very rich and brilliant appearance, and over all a large white muslin veit was flying, and adjusted over her arms. Thus blind folded and bound, she sat like an idol statue, to be looked at, while sherber was handed round and compliments exchanged.

We then passed into a larger room, where the ceremony was to be per-formed. The Coptic Patriarch, who knew the bridegroom, had come to preside himself. He, and two or three at-tendant priests in large black turbans, were at one end of the room, a table, with lighted candles, in the middle; on the other side a row of chorister boys, in white robes and brocaded scarfs, and the men, who were friends or rela-tives, assembled round. The women were all in an inner room, but we were allowed to remain where the priests were conducting the service. The brideg o.m. a dark-raced Abyssinian, sat op-posite the Patriarch, with a brocaded mantle tied over his shoulders. The service was very long; the greater part consisted of prayers or psaims chanted in the Coptic language by the chorister, in embroidered veil or mantle over the shoulders of the two, so as to shelter both together, and then placed two pasteboard gilt crowns on their heads. Then he held a book over them, and read an exhortation in Arabic; after which he laid a hand on the head of each, and he hid a hand on the head of each, and gently knocked them together, which operation could not be performed without a general smile. Then two rings were produced, the hands joined under the bride's veil, and the rings put on by the priest. All this time the pair sat quite passive—not a word spoken by other; and after some more prayers. either; and after some more prayers read in Arabic and some Coptle ing, the whole was concluded, and the bride, still in her blindfold condition, was marched off by her attendants to the women's room to receive the visits of her female acquaintances, while the nusband went up to sainte the Fat-riarch, kissing a small cross he held in his hand, and in return having his bridat muntle unfastened by the great

After all was over Mr. Shakoor asked and obtained permission for the bride's old schoo -fellows to sing one of their hymns, which they did nicely, led by their excellent teacher. It was the first time probably that the Patriarch had ever heard a Gospel hymn in his own tongue; he expressed his delight in the warmest terms, and actually sent next day for a hymn-b ok to take for himself. And here I should mention that the Patriarch has shown himself most friendly to my sister's schools, and treats the missionaries with marked courtesy an unreformed church, he seems to have a genuine value for and love of the word of God. On one of his female acquaint, ances, the mother of a pupil in the school, teiling him she was learning to read, he encouraged her to persevere, and promised to give her himself a New l'estament as soon as she should be suficiently advanced to read it. He is known as a man of remarkably liberal views. We were glad to observe that during the whole ceremony of the mar-riage no allusion was made to the Virgin or saints, nor was any picture or image presented for worship.-[London

Fall From a Four-story House.

On Saturday afternoon a man hands John T. Denno, while engaged with two or three other men in removing the snow from the roof of the four-sory ten-snow from the roof of the four-sory tenement brick block owned by S. Salis-bury, jr., at the north end of Main street, had the mistortune to be carried off the roof with a large snow slide, and fell a distance of filty feet to the ground, but, strange to say, was not seriously in-jured. He was near the ridge pole at the time the slide began, and as the snow around the deck sky-light was about three feet deep, he did not deem a rope around his body necessary for his

by a layer of ice, and this ice Mr. Denno proceeded to cut with his shovel. As ne did so the whole mass of snow began to slide, and he went down to the ground on the back side of the house with it, He was picked up, and Dr. C. H. Davis was called to attend him. It was found that his slie was somewhat hurt, but no bones were broken, and yesterday ne was quite comfortable at his home on Central street. This is the second long fall Mr. Denno has had, the first being from the staging of the Universalist Church in Webster several years ago. He then fell forty-three feet, turning four and a ball someraults and leaded in a and a half somersaults, and landed in a sitting position without injury. The staging held him up in his descent that time, the same as the snow did on Saturday,-[Worcester Spy.

---HOW TO CURE SLEEPLESSNESS .- Thou sands suffer from wake utness, says the London Medical Examiner, who are otherwise in good health. To some of them this become a habit, and too often a growing one. Some resort to soporific drugs, and this is how the opium crave is often initiated. Others find wine or spirits occasionally effectual, and are thus induced to take alcohol every night, and not a few, it is to be feared, have in this way laid the foundation of intemperance. There have, however, never been wanting people who have found a way of going to sleep without resort to such measures. The mesmerists at one time were popular, and from them a host of people learned that looking at any fixed point steadily would often inany fixed point steadily would often induce sleep. In the dark, nowever, this is not so easy; but this difficulty was not felt in Braidism, which consisted merely in closing the eyes and trying to merely in closing the eyes and trying to think they were watching attentively the stream of air entering and leaving the nostrils. This supports Dr. Cooke's practice, but at other times his plan quite failed. It is certainly worth one's while who is occasionally sleepless to give it a trial. In doing so they should breathe very quietly, rather deeply and at long intervals, but not long enough to cause the least feeling of uneasiness. In fine, they should imitate a person sleeping, and do it steadily for several minutes.

A DEAD MAN'S ORDER .- The New Orleans Republican tells this wicked story: "A sugar maker, who might as well be called Onesimus Smith as any-thing else, died recently in one of our thing else, died recently in one country parishes. He was not long ili, and the day before he died he had or-dered a bill of goods through his commission merchant in New Orleans. The news of the man's death flew on the wings of wire, but the requisition for supplies came along in a slow steam-boat way, and arrived two or three days afterward. A portion of the order was sent to a wholesale drug-house for an article used largely in sugar-making. It was a well-managed drug-nouse, and its order clerk below was in the habit of communicating through a speakingtube with the book-keeper above before filling an order, the object of this shooting whispers back and orth through the tin communicator being to ascertain it the person ordering goods is entitled to credit. In the case we refer to the order above the white the reder clerk shouted up, 'How's the ac-count of Ouesimus Smith?'
